

Aboriginal Education Research Series

The reports in this series provide a wealth of information on promising practices among Aboriginal students in diverse settings across Canada.

Data gathered from school administrators, teachers, students, elders and parents and governing authorities yields valuable insight into practices that positively affect student outcomes. The topics examined include school leadership and governance, climate, partnerships, curriculum and programs, instructional strategies, language and culture, and assessment practices. All include a set of recommendations.

Sharing Our Success: More Case Studies in Aboriginal Schooling was nominated in 2007 for the Canadian Education Association's Whitworth Award for Education Research.

These publications would be a valuable addition to resource materials in any library.
